

The Free Folk Project

freefolk.co

The Free Folk Project is both a physical and online, international community about self-sustainability, self-sufficiency and self-empowerment.

Our philosophy is to work in pure alignment with nature, complimenting and harnessing our Earth's strengths in synergy with our technological advances, with the intention to become an energy-independent & zero waste organisation within the next few years.

Our physical community is the creation of a supported neighbourhood, built from the ground up. Using natural materials to create our own homes, cherishing child-led learning for our Wee Folk, building with and for them, a creative, natural play and learning area, where we nurture their own interests and passions. Next to that, offering the best environment for our Bee Folk. Further into the project will be the creation of a multi-purpose community centre, natural swimming pond, adventure playground, animal welfare centre, birthing pod and our own library and apothecary for our self-empowered health journey.

Our website will provide a free mental-health and emotional well-being platform, to support people through challenging times. We are also in the early stages of building our own free, online social platform, where folks from all around the world can connect with one another and share their own journeys and experiences.

To showcase all of the aforementioned, we will also produce a docu-series which will entertain, inform and encourage our audience to become as positive, empowered and self-sufficient as possible in their own lives.

The Free Folk Land

Having already established a hugely talented team, created a vibrant and intriguing website and grown a large audience from the ground up, we have recently moved into phase two of the project, where the real work begins.

We are incrementally acquiring an entire valley in the south of Spain, where we look to repurpose the land and in doing so create beautiful content that showcases our adventure.

First up, we are raising €150,000 to secure the first piece of land in this stunning valley, which will become the beating heart of our physical community.

The land will serve as a hub where visitors can meet us, share their talents, exchange ideas and explore the valley to potentially acquire their own land, become custodians of an existing piece of land, or volunteer and learn to build an entire neighbourhood from scratch and fully in line with nature.

The land has ample water, solar generated power and several lodgings to become the perfect foundation for this aspiring and magical project.

We are in the process of rewilding the land, building a small film studio and taking the first steps in our organic olive oil adventure. We have amazing plans to launch our own creative agency and produce content, rich in integrity, for brands and companies we share values with.
